

Making Connections...

Rural churches are good at mission!

This short workbook is designed for use with small groups and will help with creative thinking and new initiatives. Rural congregations often benefit from considering fresh possibilities and ideas.

The many connections that already exist in rural communities between people of church or chapel and the wider community offer great opportunity to share the gospel in action and worship. This short, easy-to-use workbook includes sections on working with others, use of land and buildings, involving young people, sharing faith and working with schools, culminating in the final section on creative worship. Each section includes Bible study, stories, discussion starters and action points which will help your church make more of the connections you have. Go for it!

“ The simple way the ideas are presented helped our group get hold of an opportunity we had missed before. Now we're getting on with it. Thank you. ”

The book is published by ACORA Publishing and available from the Arthur Rank Centre, the churches rural resource centre, at £3.50 plus post and packing (50p per copy).
